In the lowest reaches of Azokh Cave in western Azerbaijan, archaeologists have found tools and remains dating back 1.5 million years. The six chambers of the cave complex hold a bounty of prehistoric remains, and it’s thought that the caverns were occupied for nearly two million years.

Ilaha Rasulova, of Azerbaijan, is a teacher trainer at the Azerbaijan Teacher Development Center. Her particular interest within her field is school culture and its relationship with student investment by examining school markers such as the incorporation of extracurricular activities. To develop further, Ms. Rasulova plans to acquire knowledge relating to teacher training and development.