Iran, home of the ancient Persians, is one of the world’s 10 oldest civilizations in history. It is thought to be the oldest continuing major civilization in the world.

Ms. Khodaverdi has worked as a university lecturer of English as a foreign language in Iran for many years. In recent years, she has gained an interest in teaching foreign languages to students with high-functioning autism. This is a field not yet well-developed in her country, and it will be her focus during her time with the Humphrey Fellows.
