Vanderbilt School of Nursing in pursuit of this Masters of Science 3rd and 4th year students. In the fall, Steven will attend the Independent Study program that will be used by the same way that he did. This summer, Steven is working with the students and being able to watch them experience college in year. His favorite part about Next Steps is spending time with an Ambassadore before becoming a job coach during his senior May. He got involved with Next Steps during his junior year as Steven Wood just graduated from Vanderbilt University this past August. Next Steps would like to thank the 8 wonderful counselors and 2 great nurses who dedicated their time this week to ensure that the students had a transformative, safe, and fun experience.

In August, we had 22 students from around the country start their journey at Vanderbilt. A weeklong orientation took place starting on August 10th and consisted of 25-hour days. Students were able to make up for the lack of summer, which is often the time when students can explore opportunities and work in their fields of interest. Students had the opportunity to meet next steps counselors, Ambassadors, and different staff members during this week, which includes the Student Accessibility Program. There were also several field trips planned for students to explore Nashville. Students had the opportunity to tour the campus, attend classes, sleep in a dorm, explore the city, and have fun with their peers.

The purpose of this week was to give students the chance to experience what it's like to be a student in college. They had the opportunity to experience college first-hand and learn what it's like to live and study in a university setting. Students were able to meet new people, experience different cultures, and learn about the different resources that are available to them. It was also an opportunity for them to experience the college environment and how it will be different from their high school. Students were able to attend classes, explore the campus, and get a feel for what it's like to be a student in college.

The topic of the presentation was about how to contact legislators. Steven Wood, a rising senior at Vanderbilt majoring in Special Education, discussed how to contact legislators for them to know about the issues. He thinks it is important to contact legislators for them to know about the issues, because it gives them a greater understanding of what to look for and change. Accessible transportation for this friends is another issue that he currently understanding of what to look for and change. Accessible transportation for this friends is another issue that he currently understands of what to look for and change. Accessible transportation for this friends is another issue that he currently understands of what to look for and change.

Jamal Underwood is a Next Steps at Vanderbilt Class of 2017 Highlighted Speaker. Jamal has continued her role as an Ambassadore and has also served on the Ambassadore executive board. Her favorite part about the topic of the presentation was about how to contact legislators. Steven Wood, a rising senior at Vanderbilt majoring in Special Education, discussed how to contact legislators for them to know about the issues. He thinks it is important to contact legislators for them to know about the issues, because it gives them a greater understanding of what to look for and change. Accessible transportation for this friends is another issue that he currently understands of what to look for and change. Accessible transportation for this friends is another issue that he currently understands of what to look for and change. Accessible transportation for this friends is another issue that he currently understands of what to look for and change.

In the fall, Steven will attend the Independent Study program that will be used by the same way that he did. This summer, Steven is working with the students and being able to watch them experience college in year. His favorite part about Next Steps is spending time with an Ambassadore before becoming a job coach during his senior May. He got involved with Next Steps during his junior year as Steven Wood just graduated from Vanderbilt University this past August. Next Steps would like to thank the 8 wonderful counselors and 2 great nurses who dedicated their time this week to ensure that the students had a transformative, safe, and fun experience.

In August, we had 22 students from around the country start their journey at Vanderbilt. A weeklong orientation took place starting on August 10th and consisted of 25-hour days. Students were able to make up for the lack of summer, which is often the time when students can explore opportunities and work in their fields of interest. Students had the opportunity to meet next steps counselors, Ambassadors, and different staff members during this week, which includes the Student Accessibility Program. There were also several field trips planned for students to explore Nashville. Students had the opportunity to tour the campus, attend classes, sleep in a dorm, explore the city, and have fun with their peers.

The purpose of this week was to give students the chance to experience what it's like to be a student in college. They had the opportunity to experience college first-hand and learn what it's like to live and study in a university setting. Students were able to meet new people, experience different cultures, and learn about the different resources that are available to them. It was also an opportunity for them to experience the college environment and how it will be different from their high school. Students were able to attend classes, explore the campus, and get a feel for what it's like to be a student in college.

The topic of the presentation was about how to contact legislators. Steven Wood, a rising senior at Vanderbilt majoring in Special Education, discussed how to contact legislators for them to know about the issues. He thinks it is important to contact legislators for them to know about the issues, because it gives them a greater understanding of what to look for and change. Accessible transportation for this friends is another issue that he currently understands of what to look for and change. Accessible transportation for this friends is another issue that he currently understands of what to look for and change. Accessible transportation for this friends is another issue that he currently understands of what to look for and change.

Jamal Underwood is a Next Steps at Vanderbilt Class of 2017 Highlighted Speaker. Jamal has continued her role as an Ambassadore and has also served on the Ambassadore executive board. Her favorite part about the topic of the presentation was about how to contact legislators. Steven Wood, a rising senior at Vanderbilt majoring in Special Education, discussed how to contact legislators for them to know about the issues. He thinks it is important to contact legislators for them to know about the issues, because it gives them a greater understanding of what to look for and change. Accessible transportation for this friends is another issue that he currently understands of what to look for and change. Accessible transportation for this friends is another issue that he currently understands of what to look for and change. Accessible transportation for this friends is another issue that he currently understands of what to look for and change.